Financial education for the future: young people explore financial concepts alongside the Governor of the NBM

On July 8, 2025, over 50 young people visited the National Bank of Moldova to gain a better understanding of the role of the central bank and the importance of financial education. From innovative payments that can make our lives more convenient to financial decisions that influence the stability of a family, participants explored key concepts that have a direct impact on everyday life and current economic developments.

During the event, young people had the opportunity to talk directly with Anca Dragu, Governor of the National Bank of Moldova, who, through a clear and accessible approach, highlighted how understanding economic mechanisms and responsible resource management can contribute to a balanced personal and professional path.

“Economic laws can significantly change our lives. It is important to know them, understand them, and apply them responsibly, regardless of our future profession. Whether we are doctors, engineers, artists, or entrepreneurs, we need a minimum level of economic literacy to make responsible decisions and build a stable future. Financial education helps us to be more autonomous, more aware of our choices, and better prepared for life's challenges. A financially educated society is more stable and prosperous,” emphasized Ms. Anca Dragu.

The question-and-answer session with the Governor of the NBM was an interactive moment appreciated by participants, who asked questions about investments, savings, access to credit, and other financial concepts. Through clear and encouraging answers, Ms. Anca Dragu motivated young people to be curious, informed, and involved in their own financial path.

The visit continued with a guided tour of the exhibition hall, where the young people discovered the history of the Moldovan leu, the collection of commemorative and jubilee coins issued by the NBM, as well as other central banks. The educational workshop, held with the support of representatives from the Cash Operations Division and the FinTech Division of the NBM, gave participants the chance to discuss how modern technologies are driving financial services, the advantages of the MIA – Instant Payments system created by the National Bank, and the security features of the national currency – the Moldovan leu.

These educational visits are part of the National Campaign "Financial Education for All," conducted by the National Bank of Moldova, which aims to provide relevant economic knowledge to all citizens, regardless of age or profession, regardless of their location, thus supporting the development of a more resilient and financially better prepared society.
