Group of Banking Supervisors from Central and Eastern Europe (BSCEE)

The Group of Banking Supervisors from Central and Eastern Europe is a regional organization, without legal personality, which promotes cooperation among the banking supervisory institutions of Central and Eastern European countries.

The National Bank of Moldova became a member of the BSCEE in June 1996, by signing the Agreement on the organization and governing of the BSCEE Group (with subsequent amendments and additions).

Membership in the BSCEE Group allows the National Bank of Moldova to participate in the exchange of experience among the group members, in the process of continuous professional development of its staff, and development of new standards. Additionally, to the NBM benefits from methodological assistance in the field of prudential regulation of banks. Collaboration within the BSCEE fosters the competitiveness of the domestic banking sector and its ability to attract investments, including foreign ones, resulting in an increased capacity of banks to satisfy the demand for banking services of the various sectors and industries of the economy.

Additional information is available on the BSCEE website [1].
